Colorectal cancer in Switzerland (ICD-10 C18-20)

New cases by age groups

- The trend in the incidence rate of colorectal cancer over the last 30 years varies by age group.
- Whilst the incidence rate has risen among people aged between 20 and 49 (early-onset cancer), it has fallen among older age groups.
- However, incidence rates are significantly lower among younger people than among older people.
- Between 2018 and 2022, an average of 190 men and 180 women aged 20–49 were diagnosed with colorectal cancer each year in Switzerland, compared with 1,350 men and 1,170 women in the over-70 age group.
